Bradley C. Giglio

630-529-4761

Bradley Giglio is an experienced trial attorney with more than ten years of trial experience. Bradley spends time with his clients, carefully understanding what they need and what they are seeking, and brings all of his experience to bear in fighting on their behalf. Bradley's success speaks for itself in the many examples of how he has helped his clients obtain positive outcomes in difficult situations.

Bradley successfully tried an Order of Protection case for his client whose ex-husband was using the children as a means to harass her while avoiding prosecution by the State's Attorney. After the Order of Protection was entered against the ex-husband, he appealed the case to try and get it thrown out. Bradley stood by his client and had the experience and ability to continue fighting in the Appellate Court. Bradley defended the appeal and was successful in keeping the Order of Protection for his client. When the Order of Protection was due to expire, Bradley traveled to a separate county and once again went to a hearing for his client and obtained an extension of the Order of Protection. It was then that Bradley's goal was realized in the peace that his client gained through the Order of Protection.

Bradley successfully defended a client who was being deported in Immigration Court for having committed a criminal offense. Bradley carefully reviewed the client's case and filed documents to Cancel the Removal Proceeding. After compiling an extensive hardship packet and presenting the documentation to the Court, the removal proceeding was stopped and the client's Permanent Resident status was reinstated. The client is now able to remain in the United States with his two children.

Bradley has successfully defended clients charged with criminal offenses in Federal and State Court charged with Felonies and Misdemeanors including charges of Delivery of a Controlled Substance, Domestic Battery, Leaving the Scene of an Accident, Possession with intent to Deliver, Aggravated Battery, Robbery, DUI, traffic, among other offenses.

Bradley also successfully assisted a client who came to Bradley when his Asylum case was being denied after having been in this country for 25 years. Bradley identified another avenue for the client to remain in the United States, filed for NICARA relief, obtained Permanent Resident status for his client, and his client has been allowed to remain in the United States with his family.

At Mevorah Law Offices LLC, Bradley focuses on litigation, bringing his criminal and civil trial experience in DuPage, Cook, Will and Champaign Counties. He is a rising star, asked to manage this twelve-attorney law firm because of his courtroom and management experience as well as his client-centered approach to his practice.

Bradley is a born litigator and is a “go-getter,” having tried several jury trials before even graduating law school. He enhanced his trial ability as a prosecutor with the Cook County State’s Attorney for seven years and as an associate with the Mevorah Law Offices. In the Cook County State’s Attorney’s office Bradley handled criminal appeals including arguing several cases before the First District Court of Appeals, serving in the Felony Trial Division, and serving in a specialized unit handling sex offenses committed by offenders in a position of authority such as priests or police officers and cases where the offender sexually assaulted more than one victim.

Bradley underwent negotiation training at the FBI Academy at Quantico, Virginia, and interned with the U.S. Army JAG Corps where he assisted in the defense of a Sergeant being Court Martialed. He has also been trained in computer and internet crimes, specifically in search and recovery and forensic investigations at the Regional Computer Forensic Laboratory (RCFL) in Chicago. Bradley has also received training at the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children related to online crimes against children.

Brad’s commitment and attention to his clients comes from his advocacy work for the Office of Women’s Programs at the University of Illinois as a Campus Acquaintance Rape Educator and Instructor. His ability to connect with clients and address their needs earned him Client Counseling Champion at the University of Illinois College of Law.

Brad has also dedicated his time to the free legal clinic at the University of Illinois-College of Law where he handled divorces for women victimized by domestic violence and obtained social security/disability benefits for a severely disabled person. Bradley prepares each of his cases for trial and is ready to go to trial to fully represent his client’s interests.
